Creating a Culture that Says
No to Violence Against Women
November 25- December 10, 2002

International Calendar of Campaign Activities

This year marks the 12th year of the 16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence Campaign. Stemming from the Global Center's first Women's Global Leadership Institute, the Campaign links issues concerning violence against women and human rights and emphasizes that all forms of violence, whether perpetrated in the public or private sphere, are a violation of human rights. The dates chosen for the campaign symbolically make this link: November 25 marks the International Day Against Violence Against Women and December 10 is International Human Rights Day. The sixteen-day period also highlights other significant dates, including December 1 (World Aids Day) and December 6 (the anniversary of the Montreal Massacre).

For the past 11 years, activities have been organized around the world during the 16 Days of Activism, drawing participation from hundreds of thousands of individuals. The purpose of the International Calendar of Campaign Activities, developed annually, is multifold: to highlight these organizing efforts as part of a broader movement for women's human rights; to provide others with examples of activities and strategies used by individuals and organizations during the Campaign; and to provide an opportunity for individuals to join and support plans already in existence. Past calendars can be accessed via the Global Center's web site, <http://www.cwgl.rutgers.edu>, by selecting a year under the category, "Calendars from Past Campaigns," in the left-hand column of the 16 Days home page. The information contained in this calendar concerns the current 2002 International Calendar of Campaign Activities.

The Center asks that all participants of the 16 Days Campaign - past as well as present - send documentation from their events, i.e., posters, pictures, t-shirts, video footage, poems, songs, statements, reports, etc., to the Center.

General Activities and Ongoing Events

Africa

The African Women's Development and Communication Network (FEMNET) was set up in 1988 to share information, experiences, ideas and strategies among African women's non-governmental organizations (NGOs) through communications, networking, training, and advocacy so as to advance women's development, equality, and other women's human rights in Africa. For the 16 days campaign this year, FEMNET prepared a multi-media kit containing posters, press advertisements, and stickers. These will be shared by various men's groups and adapted for use in their countries. FEMNET collaborated with the coalition on Violence Against Women and the Men Against Gender Based Violence group in Kenya for activities planned at national level.

Australia, South Australia

Senator Natasha Stott Despoja launched the South Australian focus of this international campaign at the Migrant Museum Courtyard on Kintore Avenue. This year's "16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence" aimed to raise community awareness about the prevalence of adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse (CSA) and the importance that "being believed" plays in their healing. "One in three women are survivors of childhood sexual abuse," Director of Women's Health Statewide, Ann-Marie Hayes said. "They are your grandmothers, mothers, sisters, daughters, partners, cousins, and friends". The 2002 campaign is the first collaborative consciousness raising response to adult survivors of CSA in Australia, possibly even the world. The launch included huge bus posters on 11 public transport buses on the metropolitan routes of Adelaide, from the 26th November to the 25th December, highlighting the prevalence of CSA and the importance of believing survivors when they disclose. Posters carried the message of the campaign, and featured a dandelion, which is a symbol for adult survivors of CSA.

The dandelion is a representation of strength, are non-gender specific, have natural herbal benefits, and adapt well to our modern world of "disturbed habitats." They symbolize freedom and movement. Free postcards, produced by Avant Card, also carried the campaign message. They were distributed in cafes, cinemas, restaurants and university campuses in South Australia. A pamphlet was produced for family, friends and partners of survivors of CSA highlighting ways to be supportive and reminders of ways to care for themselves. The launch featured music, as well as live painting by Eye Candy, Aural Sweets, and an address by the survivor group Silent Too Long. They have also encouraged a journalist to write about the 16 days campaign internationally to raise awareness about this event. They planned on having a lot of media coverage in order to give this issue some visibility. In Adelaide it really is an invisible issue, as it probably is in the rest of Australia. Sponsorship for the buses was provided by: Women's Health Statewide, University of South Australia, Yarrow Place Rape & Sexual Assault Service, Victim Support Service, Office for the Status of Women, Inner Southern Community Health Centre, Adelaide Central Community Health Service, SHine SA, Northern Metropolitan Community Health Service, Noarlunga Health Service, Adelaide Central Mission, The Anglican Diocese of Adelaide, The Catholic Archdiocese of Adelaide Uniting Church of Adelaide , JC Decaux, Zonta Clubs of Adelaide. Sponsorship for the posters was provided by: Research and Education Unit on Gendered Violence, University of South Australia, Women's Health Statewide. Sponsorship for the pamphlet was provided by: Women's Health Statewide, Sponsorship for the postcards was provided by: Avant Card, Women's Health Statewide, Sponsorship for the launch was provided by: Women's Health Statewide, Relationships Australia, Migration Museum, Zamels ATLAS Party Hire. ### Cambodia, Phnom Penh

CAMBOW, a non-political network of 33 Cambodian Non-Governmental Organizations that focuses primarily on advancing the cause of women, organized events and activities in Cambodia's capital Phnom Penh. This year, CAMBOW organized a march that will be led by an elephant with approximately 600 participants. The march will be held on November 30, and will begin at Phnom Penh's Independence Monument and end at Wat Phnom. After the march, CAMBOW members gave speeches related to violence against women and women's rights as human rights in the Wat Phnom area. In addition, CAMBOW has been working intensely on recommendations for new draft laws on domestic violence and trafficking in Cambodia, and CAMBOW members talked specifically on these issues in order to raise public awareness. An educational drama was also shown focusing on different forms of rape, including marital rape and forced prostitution. To further this education on women's issues in Cambodia, CAMBOW members distributed and disseminated information from their respective organizations relating to violence against women, as well as contact information for resources and services available to victims of violence against women. ### Croatia, Zagreb

For the first time, the target group for B.a.B.e.'s (Be active, Be emancipated) activities are men. The main activities included: a music video, an open art installation, short cartoon animations for TV, a radio jingle, video clips, a petition, and a street action at the main square in Zagreb where posters were presented with statements against violence against women signed by men. Street actions in different cities inviting men to sign a statement against violence against women and a 5-minute documentary about the street actions were presented by the Croatian television networks. This year they decided to include men and make them speak in public, distancing themselves from all the men who are violent against their female partners. They have officially registered 50 women's NGOs as the Women's Network of Croatia, and all NGOs in the network are supporting our campaign with activities in their local region. B.a.B.e. is partnering on this project with AUTONOMNA ŽENSKA KUĆA - Autonomous Women's House, the Center for Women War Victims, and Fade In. ### Hungary, Budapest

NaNE's, a women's rights association, runs a hotline for victims of domestic and sexual force. They engage themselves in the fight against violence against women and children, and they attempt to exercise political influence through activism and various events. They installed the first hotline in Hungary for female victims of violence, which offers concrete support and assistance for woman and children. In the past, NaNE organized an international conference about "force and democracy." This year, their events for the 16 Days produced 40 new silent witnesses through funding from the Network Women's Program of the Open Society Institute, bearing the stories of women who were killed by their (ex) partners because of domestic violence. The witnesses are sculptures that are painted red, and each one bears the true story of a woman, in only a few sentences, stating the date and circumstances of her death. The stories come from crime news reports of a one-year period between October 2001 and October 2002, and from surviving relatives who have contacted the organization and asked them to remember their daughters/sisters/mothers by displaying their names and stories.

India, Tamilnadu

GUIDE, an organization that is committed to fighting for the rights of rural women, has been involved with the campaign for the past 6 years. GUIDE, or the Gandhian Unit for Integrated Development Education, is committed to the cause of empowerment of women through fighting violence of all types, including physical, mental, emotional, and sexual, and in all places, whether it is at school, the workplace, or home. It vouches for the rights of women's participation in the process of decision-making, especially at the local level. Since 1985, GUIDE has been organizing and forming coalitions with other groups. GUIDE has collected some of the following statistics about violence against women in India: every 7 minutes, a crime against a woman occurs; every 7 minutes, a woman is sexually harassed; every 43 minutes, a child is kidnapped; every 54 minutes, a woman undergoes sexual violence; every 102 minutes, a woman dies for dowry; each minute, a woman is murdered; and every 40 minutes, a woman commits suicide. The main goal of GUIDE's 16 days campaign this past year was to educate the public and government about issues surrounding violence against women. This year they focused on the following themes: Violence On Young Women Domestic Workers; Violence On Women and Young Girls Due to Globalization; Violence Due to Alcoholism; and Educating the Public, Government People, and Political Persons. They performed street theater, held a poster exhibition, issued handbills to the public, worked on resolutions to the government, and held press meetings with the media. (For more information, please contact the director of GUIDE, Ms. R. Vasantha- E-mail: guide@xlweb.com, Address: 215J.C.K. Nagar, Chengalpattu, PIN 603 001, Telephone: 43969, Fax: 423169)

The action will be an evening to launch the 'model of work,' a women's aid document, highlighting how they approach their work with women experiencing violence in relationships. They also launched an email campaign to key opinion formers, which involves sending a statistic regarding violence against women by email each day for the sixteen days. They also held a fundraising campaign in restaurants.

Kazakhstan, Almaty City

Public Foundation PODRUGI Crisis Center, together with Feminists League Public Association, and Almaty City organized a campaign to inform the inhabitants of Almaty City about the problem of violence against women; to make them aware that it is a crime and a violation of women's human rights; to disclose the social reasons and consequences of violence; and to raise the public's awareness about the increasing existence of this serious problem in the society. The target groups are Youth, Citizens of Almaty City, Mazhilis, Mslikhat, and Operating groups of policemen.

For youth they conducted trainings on the theme of domestic violence among the students of 4-year course of the Juridical University. They conducted interviews among the students of 4 year-course of the Juridical University covering not less than 163 students with the purpose of understanding how the reasons for domestic violence are seen through the eyes of young people. They also conducted an open composition on the theme "What will I do in order to prevent violence in my future family?" among the students of 4-year course of the Juridical University. Poster exhibition of students' works from the art college and students of Almaty State University were held on the theme “There is no excuse to domestic violence!” There were at least 20 posters in the offices of: UNIFEM, USAID, OBSE, Counterpart Consortium, American Bar Association, Feminists League, and on the round table with deputies of mazhylis and maslikhat, as well as in the art college and at Almaty State University. To use the posters during seminars, trainings were conducted by PODRUGI Crisis center. They also distributed information and material about domestic violence: posters, booklets, calendars, leaflets in at least 7 city hospitals, 15 clinics, 22 stores, and 9 educational institutions. They also conducted the meeting of youth on the theme “There is no excuse to domestic violence,” with participation of young people and youth organizations. Two mini-trainings on the theme “Domestic violence” for cadets of Academy of Ministry of Internal Affairs were conducted, which covered at least 49 cadets. An article in the youth journal Youth and Rights on the theme “Rights of Women - human rights” was published.

For the citizens of Almaty city they encouraged them to “Call PODRUGI Crisis Center.” During the whole course of the campaign (16 days) they received not less than 253 telephone calls from the population of Almaty city. They also distributed information and materials about domestic violence — placards, booklets, calendars in 7 city hospitals, 15 police stations, 22 stores, and 9 educational institutions. This was done with the aid of students, volunteers and co-workers. They also organized a “White ribbon” activity in the streets of Almaty city with the purpose of disclosing the reasons of violence with participation of the population of Almaty city, local authorities, other NGO and international organizations. Public service announcement were broadcasted on TV channels of Almaty city, on the Kazakhstan-I Radio channel, and they were printed in the Vremya (The Time) and Komsomolskaya Pravda (Komsomol Truth) newspapers. News reports were issued on TV channels such as USA, Rakhat, 31-Channel, and TAN. Partner organizations include Feminists League; volunteers; College of Arts; Juridical University; various international organizations and NGOs; Almaty State University; Subdivisions On Protection of Women Against Violence; police clinics, stores, hospitals; Malvina Publishing House; Academy of Ministry of Internal Affairs; Municipal Akimat ; deputies of Mazhylis and Maslikhat; Vremya and Komsomolskaya Pravda newspapers; Atshabar and Econom newspapers; Uzhnaya Stolitsa TV-channel; Rakhat TV-channel; TAN TV-channel; and Kazakhstan-I radio channel.

For the Deputies of the Maliskhat and Mazhylis they organized activities that seek to strengthen the understanding of the necessity of adoption of the law about domestic violence. They also obtained privileges from the deputies of municipal maslikhat for maintenance of the shelter of PODRUGI Crisis Center. Activities included writing and publishing in Vremya newspaper the open letter to the deputies of Mazhylis of parliament and Maslikhat of Almaty City with appeal to adopt the law about domestic violence and provision of privileges for maintenance of the shelter. A round table on the theme “There is no excuse to domestic violence!” was organized with the representatives from Mazhylis and Maslikhat, international organizations, NGOs, women, and victims of violence. They discussed the draft of the legislation about domestic violence, and made suggestions to the legislation regarding privileges for maintenance of the shelter of PODRUGI Crisis Center. There was also an action, “White banner,” in the streets of Almaty City with the purpose of disclosing the reasons of domestic violence with participation of the representatives from Mazhylis and Maslikhat, NGOs, youth, and the mass media. Partner organizations include: Feminists League; volunteers; College of Arts; Juridical University; various international organizations and NGOs; Almaty State University; Academy of Ministry of Internal Affairs; Municipal Akimat; Deputies of Mazhylis and Maslikhat; Malvina Publishing house; Vremya and Komsomolskaya Pravda newspapers; USA TV-channel; Kazakhstan-I Radio; Rakhat TV-channel; Department of Women Defense from violence; American Bar Association and TAN TV-channel.

For the Operating Police Group (who respond to the incoming calls to the police center) the activities were to inform the police about the reasons and consequences of domestic violence in order to achieve the adequate reaction of policemen in cases of domestic violence. Among the activities included were 3 informational seminars on the theme of domestic violence with the operating police group, which covered not less than 50% of co-workers (in Almaty city work approximately 600 policemen). There were also training groups consisting of personnel of PODRUGI Crisis Center, district police inspectors and representatives from subdivisions on protection of women against violence. There were two mini-trainings regarding domestic violence for cadets of the Academy of Ministry of Internal Affairs, which covered not less than 49 cadets. Partner organizations include: Feminists League; Academy of Ministry of Internal Affairs; Malvina Publishing house; operating group of police; Subdivision on Protection of Women against Violence; district police inspectors; Na Strazhe Newspaper (On Guard); Rakhat TV – channel; TAN TV-channel; Vremya and Komsomolskaya Pravda newspapers; and USA TV-channel.

Kyrgyzstan

They ran an advertising campaign, which included “running line,” billboards, folklore jingles on the radio, newspaper publication on the campaign, posters around the city of Sezim, and many spots in the mass media. A documentary, “Silence Multiples Violence,” was shown on television and produced specifically for the 2001 16 days campaign in Sezim. There was also an interactive theater performance with discussion afterwards (4 times during campaign).

Kyrgyzstan

The campaign was conducted in Kyrgyz, Russian, and Uzbek languages. The campaign took place all over the country, in remote areas and in the center, and expanded to villages that in the past were not covered by the campaign. It covered areas where functional literacy of women is much lower than in city, traditions are strong and negative displays of radical Islam are observed. The project was realized by all the members of the network that were working in each region. They have experience in organizing campaigns, cooperating with mass-media, and with local state structures. Activities included: developing and printing out with a typographical method 4000 pieces of information materials such as the booklet, calendars, instructions, and 800 pieces of posters and stickers; producing souvenirs, such as glasses and candles, with a label “is not present to violence”; preparing a press release about the purposes and tasks of campaign; conducting a press conference for journalists; conducting seminars, meetings, and roundtables with the representatives of local self-management, the state structures, and the population in 7 regions - there will be 6 seminars in each area (50 participants/each). Altogether, 2100 persons, representatives of different layers of the society (representatives of local authorities, governmental structures, youth, women victims of violence) were present to distribute all information and visual materials through volunteers and the employees of crisis centers. There were 14400 units of printed materials distributed in the streets, in places that women attend regularly, educational institutions and public places, in offices of mass media, local authorities, and NGOs. They organized a round table with the participation of executors of a given project, deputies, representatives of executive authorities. There was an interactive dialogue on republican TV "Zamana" during the 16 days, and presentations in mass media and newsletters of NGOs throughout the course of the campaign (interviews, articles, histories of victims and positive examples of fight against violence against women). They are also measuring the results of the campaign in one village of each region before conducting the campaign next year (after 16 days of activity). They plan to give the report about the results of the campaign to the public through the Internet and mass media, and to give reports on the activities to the donor organizations.

Lao PDR, Vientiane

During the 16 days the Gender and Development Group (GDG) launched a violence against women research project. They conducted focus discussion groups and interviews with Lao women and men in target villages. Afterwards, they wrote a report on the findings and distributed it widely to government and international NGO officials. The report included recommendations on how to take action against VAW. These recommendations and the report will also be shared with target villages in the form of workshops on VAW. ### Latin American and the Caribbean

The Latin America and Caribbean Section of UNIFEM launched a campaign to celebrate the 16 days of activism towards the eradication of violence against women in the region. A key priority of the Latin America and Caribbean Section of UNIFEM was to coordinate and support efforts to eradicate violence against women in the region. The 16 days of activism, 25 November – 10 December 2002, were an ideal opportunity to showcase the work of UNIFEM and its partners, and to reflect on where we are in the region after a decade of efforts by civil society, government, and international organizations to address the issue. Three key dates in the movement to eradicate violence against women are: 25 November – International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women; 1 December – World AIDS Day; 10 December – International Human Rights Day. To commemorate these historic dates, UNIFEM-LAC presented the following activities: Virtual Exhibit: Picturing a Life Free of Violence. In three languages, the virtual exhibit presented awareness raising materials created and was used by organizations involved with the feminist movement all over the world. The web address to the virtual exhibit is

The Violence against Women in Latin America and the Spanish Caribbean 1990-2000: Assessment of a Decade is a wide-ranging study by Isis International, the Communication and Information Service for Women, prepared in collaboration with UNIFEM, which gauges the outcomes and challenges in dealing with violence against women in Latin America and the Spanish-speaking Caribbean, evaluating the main difficulties and achievements during the decade of the 1990s. A summary of the study can be found at <http://www.unifem.org> and a complete version of the assessment can be found at ISIS website <http://www.isis.cl/mujereshoy/vi/balance/index.htm>. UNIFEM-LAC has supported the ISIS international network in the task of producing three bulletins, "Inter Redes," which were distributed electronically during the months of October – December 2002 to all the women's organizations that belong to the anti-violence movement. The bulletins contain the latest news on violence against women and human rights issues. The Mujeres Hoy window on ISIS International's website also includes a complete update on information on violence against women as well as a special electronic report about the campaign against femicide in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, "For Women's Lives, Not One More Death." These materials will be available at ISIS website at <http://www.isis.cl>. UNIFEM has commissioned a concept paper, called "What Causes Violence Against Women. Opening the Debate," which aims to delineate the causes of violence against women from Latin American and Caribbean cultural perspectives. The paper includes a bibliographical review as well as an analytical evaluation of the state of the question. A summary of the concept paper is available at <http://www.unifem.org>.

Regional Mobilization. UNIFEM and its partners are mobilizing throughout the region to celebrate gains and confront challenges in the elimination of violence against women. UNIFEM field offices in Central America, <http://www.unifem.org.mx>, the Andean region, <http://www.4.ecua.net.ec/unifem/>, and the Southern Cone, http://www.unifemcolesul@undp.org.br, have a full calendar of events, marches, workshops, launchings, and other sorts of activities to mark the 16 days. Another milestone during the 16 days was the launching in Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Costa Rica and Guatemala of the new UNIFEM publication, of a new book on gender, children and penal codes. For November 25th, International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, UNIFEM-LAC supported International Feminist Radio- FIRE to produce an 8-hour uninterrupted webcast on violence against women that will be transmitted via radio and internet. Also on November 25th, FIRE produced two radio spots highlighting the effect of violence on women and society that will be transmitted by local and national radio stations throughout the region. For December 1st, World AIDS Day, FIRE produced two radio spots for local and national broadcast to raise awareness about the HIV/AIDS epidemic, how the demographics of the disease have changed, largely affecting LAC and women, and encouraging its prevention. For December 10th, International Human Rights Day, FIRE produced two more spots for local and national broadcast that highlight the achievement of the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the importance of their recognition and enforcement in the context of gender violence. For more information, visit <http://www.fire.or.cr>. The theme on World AIDS Day was Making the link between gender and HIV/AIDS stigma and discrimination. On December 1st, UNIFEM presented the brochure "Empower Women, Halt HIV/AIDS," prepared by its HIV/AIDS division, which highlights that while HIV/AIDS is certainly a health problem, the epidemic is a gender issue. AIDS disproportionately affects women and female adolescents who are socially, culturally, biologically, and economically more vulnerable to the virus. The brochure can be found at <http://www.unifem.org>. The theme for International Human Rights Day was “Living a life free of violence is a human right”. To mark the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by the United Nations General Assembly on 10 December 1948, UNIFEM seeks to make visible the advances in the LAC region in the adoption of important human rights principles to empower women such as CEDAW, its Optional Protocol, and the Convention of Belem do Para. An article can be found at <http://www.unifem.org>. After the 2001 campaign, organizers realized that the mass media - if used properly - is an ideal instrument for attracting attention to the problem; mass media can address thousands of people; mass media influences the society and can initiate purposeful efforts in eliminating this kind of discrimination; it can change the stereotypic attitudes in the society. Texts that will be used will be: The Texts of Appeal to Women: Women Do Not Have to Suffer; Let's Break the Wall of Silence Which Hides Domestic Violence; Don't Tolerate Violence; and Help is Possible — Look for it. The Texts of Appeal to Men: Enough!!! Stop! Stop Men's Violence against Children, Women and Men; Men Themselves and Not Women Must Do Something about Men's Violence; Men Who Violate the Women's and Children's Rights Show Contempt to Life Itself. It Is Inhuman and Not Manly; Witnesses of Violence: "Help the Women-Victims of Violence to Speak Up about It; Help the Victim to Free Herself from the Role of the Victim; Don't Make Violence Invisible by Your Silence. Every day the society received detailed and thorough information about the campaign, and various discussions were organized. Every day all the TV CHANNELS showed the video clips made for the campaign. Every day the biggest radio stations: the National Radio, M-1, M1+, Lietus, Žini radijas, Radijo centras, and Pakas will transmit the radio jingle. The morning program “The Morning Sounds” of the Lithuanian radio allowed for short urgent broadcasts on the topic every day during the period of the campaign. Every day informational broadcasts about the campaign will be transmitted by the “Žinių radijas”. The audience is especially attracted by the "Topic of the day" and the "Topic of the week," which are updated every hour. This was done with assistance from The Lithuanian Women's Society, Men Crisis and Information Center, The Lithuanian Journalists' Union, The Lithuanian Center of Journalism, The Information Bureau of the European Committee Delegation in Lithuania, the Women's Crisis Centers, and various NGOs. Women's Aid Organization, WAO, is an independent, non-religious, non-governmental organization that opened in 1982, which is committed to confronting violence against women. It opened Malaysia's first Women's Refuge, and provided shelter, counseling, and child support to battered women. It also began a child sponsorship program, as well as a Child Care Center, which provided educational and childcare needs to ex-resident's children. Throughout the years, the WAO has also been involved in public education to create awareness about the problem of violence against women and women's rights. They have also done advocacy on legal reform and, in particular, policies and laws that discriminate against women. For this year's 16 Days Campaign, the Women's Aid Organization teamed up with Syarikat Prasarana Negara Bhd. (formerly PUTRA &STAR LRT) and Levi Strauss (M) Sdn. Bhd. in order to bring the campaign to the general public throughout Malaysia in the form of music. The KLCC PUTRA LRT radio stations became an active platform for musicians, actors, and performers to vocalize their stand against gender-based violence through their art. There were many posters throughout the PUTRA and STAR LRT line trains throughout the sixteen days to compliment the music that was begin aired everyday between 12p.m. and 2 p.m. There were also WAO members handing out brochures and interacting with the public in order to educate and raise awareness about the issue of violence against women. There were also t-shirts produced for the campaign with sponsorship from Levi Strauss. (For more information, please see the Women's Aid Organization website at <http://www.wao.org.my/>. They held two press-conferences, one at beginning and one at the end of the campaign. There was also a Media Campaign to Combat Violence against Women, which included government representatives, journalists, representatives of NGOs. There was a cycle of the radio-programs (6 programs) at the National Radio and municipal radio station, among them was one titled “Violence against women is a human rights issue.” There were also TV programs (2 programs in Romanian and Russian languages) at the National TV and private TV, among them were “NIT” and “Stop violence against women.” There was also a distribution the informational booklets (15000) entitled “Stop violence against women.” Four trainings on prevention of violence against women for journalists under gender perspective (1 day, per 30 participants - in total 100) were held. The stress was put on how it is important to challenge male journalists who will write for mass-media campaigns to strength their own attitude to the violence. There were also training for student-journalists in Cahul and Balts. A national competition of pictures of teenagers (14-19 years) entitled “Peace without tears” was also held, and the best pictures will be at the exposition. There was also a competition of posters, and the best poster will be made as transparency and placed in public places of Chisinau, Balts, and Cahul. There were also social advertisements (posters on public transport, in universities, public places, etc), as well as publications in press about the phenomena of violence. ### Nepal

Women's Rehabilitation Centre (WOREC), the Society for International Development (SID), and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA) organized a South Asia regional dialogue on the impact of political disruption on women's well being. This was a dialogue to come up with effective strategies on how various stakeholders can come together and work towards gender equity and social justice. The uprooting of populations – the lack of security and livelihoods and attack on women and children's bodily integrity – are leading to unprecedented violence. The question is how can the state, the political parties, social movements, environmental and women's groups, and concerned NGOs work together towards gender equality and social justice. The overall goal of the meeting was on how to support women's groups and social movement networks that are fighting for social justice and equity and peace in the region. Over the past decade, South Asian societies have witnessed an alarming rise in political disruption and social conflict further aggravated by the militaristic and hegemonic super power responses in the aftermath of September 11, 2001. To understand the root causes and consequences of these developments on women and other vulnerable groups, over 30 representatives of women's and social movements, research institutions, advocacy and media organizations from Nepal, India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, The Philippines, Tanzania, Lebanon, Uruguay, and Italy/Australia gathered at Nagarkot, Nepal from 27th November to 1st December 2002. The analysis and experiences shared among the participants discussed the primary causes of political disruption in South Asia, as the persisting inequalities and the widespread destruction and de-stabilization of the subsistence base of a majority of people, in particular women, 70% of whom live in rural areas. From diverse country perspectives, the meeting additionally identified the following elements as exacerbating and deepening gender oppression and violence, women's insecurity and lack of well-being: the collapse and subversion of democratic institutions; unfavorable state policies; economic globalization; and a distorted consumer culture. Participants also recognized that not all conflict is negative and that political mobilization and resistance can contribute to the creation of women's empowerment and social transformation. At the conclusion of the dialogue, the Society for International Development South Asia Network (SID-SAN) was constituted. SID-SAN will work together to understand the impact of armed conflict, chauvinist conflict and political disruption on women's livelihoods and well-being; and the contribution of economic development and economic globalization on the exacerbation and creation of political disruption and social conflict. A poster competition was arranged for students and amateurs. The suggested slogan was: 'There is No Honor in Killing'. Two age groups have been invited to participate - 15 to under 18 and 18 and above. The best three from each category were awarded cash prizes and all entrants were given a certificate of appreciation in January 2003. The posters were initially exhibited in Lahore and after the prize distribution ceremony became a traveling exhibition for the major cities of the country. We are hoping this initiative will encourage people to think about gender violence. Shirkat Gah has printed 1000 wall posters (500 each in Urdu and English) and disseminated them widely to community based organizations, NGOs, and interested individuals. The poster reads: "There is No Honor in Killing" and "16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence." 8000 Collar Buttons/badges (2500 each in Urdu and English) and 3000 key chains carrying the same caption have also been widely distributed. ## Poland

The activities organized were planned to raise social awareness of violence against women as a serious crime; educate society about causes and consequences of violence against women, in particular of domestic violence; change attitudes towards female victims and male perpetrators; raise sensitivity to victims needs; promote zero tolerance toward the perpetrators; encourage individual action, particularly by neighbors and other witnesses; and eradicate social stereotypes and prejudices constituting serious barriers to tackling violence against women more effectively. There was a focus on law and policy makers that led to increased awareness of law and policy makers and their support for the law reform. There was also an attempt to adopt and implement law and policy guidelines aimed at preventing and combating violence against women, including in particular the adoption of the restraining order and police domestic violence intervention guidelines. They also introduced changes in the family law recognizing domestic violence as the grounds for divorce, including in particular fault divorce on demand in the cases of conviction for domestic violence. They tried to increase awareness and change attitudes of law enforcement and criminal justice professionals toward violence against women, as well. In order to realize the above-mentioned objectives the Women's Rights Center implemented the following activities: organized strategic planning meeting with other women's NGOs from different regions to discuss and plan details of the campaign; provided other NGOs and partners with materials developed for the campaign; and encouraged media to be actively involved in the campaign. They encouraged TV to broadcast specific films and programs devoted to the issue of domestic violence including film developed previously by the WRC "Before the Tribunal" as well as other documentary films recommended by the WRC, as well as encouraging TV, radio, and press journalists to prepare special programs, articles about violence against women, and possibly advise them on the issue. The WRC has already developed good working cooperation with some of the media based on the previous campaigns against violence, which means that some of the activities will have the character of continuation. They also organized a press conference (jointly with other NGOs and UNDP Gender Focal Point) devoted to the 16 days media campaign and the issue of violence against women as well as activities that will be undertaken during the campaign, and encouraged media to cover events that will be organized during the campaign. In addition, they developed new TV and radio spots, and established cooperation with the advertising agency which will assist us to develop a TV spot as well as advice us on other tools and strategies. They also prepared printing materials to be used during the campaign: reprinted leaflets explaining nature, causes, and consequences of violence against women that were widely disseminated during the campaign and displayed in various institutions such as police stations, prosecutors' offices, local government, medical facilities, as well as in public transport. They also designed a new sticker and postcards with the support letter for the new law to be sent to the Parliament and to be used among others in public transport means and during various event. A new poster was designed and printed, and an information kit was prepared about the proposed draft law in the field of violence in intimate relationships. A seminar was organized jointly with the Women's Parliamentary Caucus and Governmental Bureau on the Equal Status between Women and Men, which was devoted to the issue of proposed legal changes concerning violence against women. A round table debate on the new draft law was organized jointly with the Women's Parliamentary Caucus and Governmental Bureau, as well as with the representatives of all political forces, NGOs working in the field, and media people. An open meeting for women, entitled "Learn your rights on the issue of violence against women" was organized, as well as a meeting with the police and high officials aimed at adopting new police guidelines for domestic violence regulations. ### Serbia, Belgrade

The Belgrade Women's Center organized 3 campaigns. The first campaign “React! Domestic Violence is a Crime!” campaign was lead by the autonomous women's center and was synchronized in actions that will take place in 27 cities in Serbia. It included the distribution of leaflets and posters, as well as the production and release of a special radio jingle and TV spot. They managed to make an agreement with the main state television station to play their television spot 12 times a day free of charge. The purpose of this campaign is to promote article 118a of the criminal law, which treats violence in the family as a criminal act. “Campaign for Amnesty” was made as a demand directed to the government for gaining amnesty for women who have killed their husbands but are also victims of domestic violence. The third campaign, “Domestic Violence is not a private matter!” was focused on demands for changes in the legal system in order to make it more sensible to the question of domestic violence, and is lead by Serbian society of victimology. ### Slovakia

The guiding message for this year was “Violence against Women is a Crime.” The Initiative Fifth Woman published 500 posters with the message and distributed them around Slovakia. During the campaigns they also created a radio spot and had it broadcasted by as many radio stations as possible. They also prepared an information bulletin for abused women with the most information on how and where to get help. The leaflets were distributed in psychological counseling centers, as well as to police, doctors, hospitals, and women's centers. They published articles, gave interviews, and took part in TV and radio discussions. They organized discussions with other NGOs, and provided a help line about the campaign – to disseminate information, collect opinions, and inform abused women how and where they can find help. FemAct, under the leadership of Women in Law and Development in Africa (WiDAF), held a pre-campaign press conference where they expect to draw the attention of all print and electronic media in the country. The aim was to publicize the 16 Days of activism. The Theme for the year 2002 in Tanzania was “Respect Women's Rights By Stopping Rape and Female Genital Mutilation.” (Tanzania Gender Networking Programme (TGNP) – Telephone: 255-22-2443450 and 255-22-2443205; Fax: 255-51-43244; E-mail: joseph.mzinga@tgnp.co.tz; Website: www.tgnp.co.tz)

Uganda

Radio drama skits on conflict resolution and peace building was aired on radio as well as presented in Luwero district (one of the post conflict areas). The drama skits were in five episodes and each was presented for 30 minutes. The aim of the skits was to stimulate debate and therefore listeners were given an opportunity to phone in and debate on the issues raised. Stickers were produced and distributed that say “Invest in Dialogue Not Arms” and “Invest in Dialogue, Not Arms for Sustainable Development”. (Isis – Women's International Cross Cultural Exchange (Isis-WICCE) - Telephone: 256-41-543953; Fax: 256-41-543954; e-mail isis@starcom.co.ug; website: www.isis.or.ug/).

Uganda, Kampala

There was a march/rally to begin the campaign and commemorate International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women. A band, a variety of CBO members, and high profile invited guests accompanied it. They also held a Purple Ribbon Campaign, which is a solidarity campaign similar to the red ribbon campaign of World AIDS day. Community members, staff, high profile individuals, and celebrities were approached to promote and wear a ribbon, which expresses commitment to prevent violence and solidarity with victims of violence. The campaign was launched and explained during a radio show on a prominent FM station, and subsequent publicity consolidated the message. Ten thousand ribbons were distributed. There were 10 drama performances within 4 parishes in Kawempe. Three groups were identified and trained to address how violence against women affects communities and have developed engaging dramas that will be performed in open spaces within the community. Experienced activists, who also have theatrical flair, developed pro-women storylines. The intention was to create a major event that served as a basis to begin a dialogue with a broad range of people around how domestic violence affects families and therefore communities. Two sets of interactive exhibitions that stimulates the viewer to ask deeper questions about why domestic violence occurs and what the community can do about it rotated within strategically identified workplaces including local police stations, hospitals, and community open spaces. Staff working at the respective places hosted all exhibitions. There were 8 open meetings held within Kawempe where community members were invited to discuss prevalence of domestic violence and what the community can do about it. Each meeting attracted at least 20 key local decision makers and 40 to 50 community members. ### Ukraine, Kharkiv

The campaign included TV and radio advertisements, newspaper articles, interviews of women in Kharkiv about the problem, regional conferences about the partnership problems between state/public sectors, the mass media, and publishing and distributing instructional booklets. During the "16 Days" they held a press tour for journalists, organizations that hold service fairs that solve the problem of violence against women, publications in press after press tour, reports of specialists on TV and radio, distribution of pocket calendars and social advertisement as informational handouts. They also publish an informational bulletin after the "16 Days" ends. Over 1000 Kharkiv women participated in the interviews about local mass media. There were 6 advertisement announcements about the Crisis Center's and the Shelter for Women's services in local press, 28 on oblast radio, 16 on TV before and during the 16 Days. There were also 8 articles about the problem of violence against women in local papers. About 120 representatives of official structures, NGOs, and mass media participated in a regional conference about violence prevention. Meanwhile, 30 heads of local government departments, state structures, and mass media participated in a round table discussion for developing a working method to realize the National Plan of Action about improving women's status. Overall, about 20-25 organizations involved in trying to solve the problem of violence against women participated in the social service fair. Massive amounts of informational materials was distributed among NGOs from Kharkiv oblast

to the twenty-four regions of Ukraine. About 10,000 women received information about the social service fair, and thirty local mass media institutions distributed information about the beginning of 16 Days. About fifty journalist students participated in the competition for the best article about the problem of violence against women. There were six radio programs and six TV programs on preventing violence against women during the 16 Days. About 50,000 women will get pocket calendars with the information about the Crisis Center's services and the services of Nadiya's Shelter, and 3,500 advertisements about the social services of different organizations and 5,000 announcements about holding the action will be distributed in public places. Over 1,000 organizations in Ukraine will get the instructional book "How to Open a Crisis Center and Shelter for Women," and 1,000 women will get practical help in the Nadiya Crisis Center. ### United Kingdom

For the 2002 White Ribbon Campaign WOMANKIND produced innovative materials for cinema, radio, poster, and magazine advertising for the White Ribbon Campaign 2002. They extended their advertising campaign throughout November, and in particular are keen to raise-awareness through poster advertising in bus shelters, buses, taxis, and magazines. WOMANKIND Worldwide is approaching community groups, women's and men's organizations, schools, youth clubs, businesses, celebrities, student unions, and police authorities to break the silence about violence against women in this country and fundraise for WOMANKIND Worldwide's work by blowing whistles as a fun activity. They are developing fundraising and campaigning ideas for groups across the UK to enable them to galvanize support, break the silence and spread the word whilst having fun, raising money, and informing people about the White Ribbon Campaign. WOMANKIND Worldwide released news for November 25th about attitudes towards violence against women in the UK with the aim of securing national and regional print and broadcast media coverage. The audience numbers exceeded 1 million people in 2001 and they were aiming to double that figure in 2002. WOMANKIND Worldwide sent White Ribbon Campaign Information packs to over 1,000 groups and individuals during November. The packs included materials and information about developing Blow the Whistle activities, facts and statistics about violence against women in the UK and globally, examples of how money will be spent, copies of posters and postcards and information about where to get personal help and advice. (WOMANKIND- Phone: +44 020 7549 571, Fax: +44 (0) 20 7549 570, E-Mail: ilana@womankind.org.uk, Website: www.womankind.org.uk)

Amnesty International

Amnesty International has launched a letter campaign to Russian authorities encouraging them to ensure that all allegations of human rights abuses are investigated thoroughly and impartially and that the perpetrators are brought to justice and to take steps to make domestic violence a distinct criminal offence, and ensure that law enforcement officials are trained to recognise and prosecute violence against women, including domestic violence. The authorities in Russia are failing to protect women from violence by state agents. There are regular reports of ill-treatment and torture, including rape and other sexual abuse of women in police stations and prisons. The state is failing to protect women from violence in the home. Men who beat or rape their wives are unlikely to face prosecution. The law does not recognise domestic violence as a distinct crime, although the authorities acknowledge its prevalence: they have stated that 14,000 women die every year at the hands of their husbands or other relatives. Yet they have done little to address the problem. Nearly 50 versions of a national law to address domestic violence have failed to make any progress in parliament.

United States, Maryland

The Refugee Women Leadership Project organized a variation on the Clothesline Project. Nineteen Refugee women and girls came together to talk about the significance of November 25 as well as the 16 Days. Two Afghani women sang a song about the global woman, and her constant struggle. They painted t-shirts and displayed them at the Baltimore Resettlement Center. The shirts will be up through December 10, along with statistical facts regarding violence against women worldwide. Legalise_at a support platform of migrant/women's organizations and individuals for illegalized migrant women, * No one is born illegal. No one is illegal. Laws are illegalising people. * Illegalisation means no health insurance, no possibility to secure one's existence, permanent fear of deportation. * Illegalised people are being portrayed as social, political, and economic problem. In reality, profit is being made of their situation. * Illegalised women are twice as invisible because they are generally employed in domestic work, and in the sex industry. * This situation makes illegalised women especially vulnerable and exploitable. * The new so-called "Integration Package" creates new potential for illegalisation - especially of women. DOCUMENTS FOR ALL! As pre-campaign awareness raising activity legalise_at has organized: Madjiguène Cissé: Documents for All! The Sans Papiers Movement in France. "Moving out of the shadows", that's how legalized people in France referred to their uprising. 1996, the first church in France was occupied and within the shortest time, the movement of the Sans Papiers spread throughout France. Madjiguène Cissé soon became a spokesperson of the movement. The fight of the Sans Papiers she describes as part of her own biography and as a political chronology. Madjiguène Cissé received the Carl-von-Ossietzky-Price of the International League of Human Rights in December 1998. Since July 2000, she lives in Senegal again and is active, amongst others, with REFDAF, the women's network for sustainable development in Africa. Madjigène Cissé read on two days from her book on the Sans Papiers Movement in France. Over 100 came to see and hear her, to talk and discuss. Shirkat Gah Lahore organized a seminar “There Is No Honour In Killing” (“Aurat Tay Mard Koon Kala Kali Ban Tay Qatal Karn Ghairat Kanahin”) with the collaboration of Women Rural Development Organization Sangtani in Rajan Pur – a remote area of Punjab. The seminar was attended by 145 participants from 10 different areas of southern Punjab. Background information on the ‘16 Days of Activism’ campaign and the findings of the Shirkat Gah research on so-called ‘honor killings’ carried out in Sindh, NWFP and Punjab was shared. A panel discussion was organized where the local media representative, the Deputy Superintendent Police (Rajan Pur), the forensic official, a doctor, and a lawyer were invited to speak on so-called ‘honor killings’ in light of their experience. The seminar broke the silence on violence against women and so-called honor killings in Rajan Pur and provided an opportunity for people to meet officials and professionals to share and learn of each others experiences and challenges in providing redress to survivors/victims of violence.

The Women's Coalition of St. Croix hosted a Clothesline Project Shirt-Making Workshop. The Clothesline Project began in 1990 when members of the Cape Cod Women's Agenda hung a clothesline across the village green in Hyannis, Massachusetts with 31 shirts designed by survivors of assault, rape and incest. Women viewing the clothesline came forward to create shirts of their own and the line just kept growing. Since that first display The Clothesline Project has grown to 300+ local Clothesline Projects nationally and internationally, with an estimated 35,000 shirts. The Clothesline Project has become a distinctive resource for healing from violence and creating social change. Clotheslines have been displayed at schools, universities, State Houses, shopping malls, churches, and women's events. The first national display took place April 8-9, 1995 in Washington D.C. in conjunction with NOW's Rally For Women's Lives. Similar to the AIDS quilt, The Clothesline Project puts a human face on the statistics of violence against women. The Clothesline Project increases awareness of the impact of violence against women, celebrates a woman's strength to survive, and provides an avenue for her to courageously break the silence. Families and friends of women who have died as a result of violence can make a shirt to express their deep loss.

In a picket-rally GABRIELA joined other women's groups under Task Force: Maria in commemorating the first death anniversary of Maria Theresa Carlson. Though domestic violence is the most obvious form of VAW because women victims can easily identify their perpetrators, GABRIELA points out that other forms of VAW are also alarming. "With the heightening economic crisis, women are more vulnerable to be victims of discrimination, sexual abuse, sex trafficking, and harassment. With President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's terror campaign, political repression becomes more disturbing because it results in the death, arrest, and displacement of many women," says Emmi de Jesus, Deputy Secretary General. ### Burma

International activists are outraged over Burmese military's licensing of rape. While some activists take to the streets for their protest actions, some take to the fax machine. On November 25, over 2,000 individuals and organizations from different parts of the world made their voices heard in the Office of United Nations Secretary-General Kofi Annan in New York City. They expressed their outrage over the widespread and systematic use of rape by the Burmese military regime. From there, the protesters were heard next at the Office of UN Commission of Human Rights in Geneva. "We will be visiting different parts of the world today to convey our outrage against the use of rape by the State Peace and Development Councils as a weapon of war waged against the ethnic women of Burma," says Anelyn de Luna, campaigner on human rights of Burma from Altsean Burma. "The issue is urgent. We want to reach the different members of the international community at once, all at the same time." They sent by fax the petition signed by over 2,000 individuals and organizations to UN offices and selected governments, which are continuing to engage the SPDC like Thailand, Australia, and Japan. The petition, which was launched on September 4, 2002, condemned the "brutal acts of the SPDC against the women, girls and other members of Shan communities." It also called for "concerted international pressure on the SPDC to immediately end sexual violence and other human rights abuses against the ethnic women of Burma." "The documentation of continued violence against the ethnic women of Burma is shocking," according to Somswasdi. She was referring to the cases in the report, License to Rape, released by the Shan Women's Action Network (SWAN) and Shan Human Rights Foundation (SHRF) in June of this year. In that report, there are 173 documented cases of rape of Shan women, and 83% of these were committed by officers. To date, the statistics have continued to increase. According to SHRF's latest monthly report, between June and October, 14 more Shan women were raped. Two of them were gang-raped, and seven of them were killed. The petition-signing and fax action were part of the campaign that was launched by APWLD, FORUM ASIA, AltSEAN-Burma and Friends Without Borders. On this International Day of Elimination of Violence Against Women, other activities were held in Bangkok and Chiangmai, with the theme "Burma's Shame: Military rape of ethnic women." The women's human rights activists stress that "There can never be genuine social change in Burma as long as women continue to be targets of violence. Stop the violence. Start the dialogue."

Haiti, Port-au-Prince

There were activities at the Catherine Flon square on the Champ-de-Mars. The activities to prepare for the celebration this November 25th of the International Day of Struggle to End Violence Against Women were temporarily thwarted, especially during the night of November 21 to 22, 2002, by acts of violence and political intimidation. Acts of aggression were perpetrated against people who participated in the meeting and marched in Cap-Haitian called by “Initiative Citoyenne” these past 16th and 17th of November. Acts of aggression were perpetrated shortly after in Petit Goave and Gonaives against high school and university students demonstrating to express their wish to live in a country that cares about its youth. This November 22nd, after days of students demonstrations for the autonomy of the university, it was the turn of the population in the capital, Port-au-Prince, to be taken hostage by groups of thugs, often heavily armed, openly claiming their allegiance to the actual Lavalas government. From the early hours, burning barricades, gun shots, acts of intimidation, forced the population to abandon the streets in order to avoid, once again, being victims of this blind violence. Once more, Haitian women pay the price of organized terror. Last March, women’s organizations were already denouncing the collective rapes that had become common in the gang wars of Cite Soleil. Such acts never really stopped and, these last weeks, and particularly during the night of November 21st to 22nd, women of Cite Soleil were victims of savage gang rapes. Those aggressions, which are a negation of women’s fundamental rights, are being perpetrated in complete impunity. No public authority has demonstrated the slightest concern for the victims. Those last events are another source of suffering for women, the victims, as well as those who know that they could be next at any time. (Women’s organizations - Enfofanm, Kay Fanm, Sofa Danièle Magloire and Enfofanm)

Sierra Leone

There was a launch of the campaign in the Sierra Leonean capital, Freetown, by the United Nations Mission in Sierra Leone (UNAMSIL). Radio UNAMSIL hosted two call-in radio programmes, one on rural and disabled women to give them the possibility of echoing their concern about gender-based violence [and] the other on uprooted women. Other activities were planned, he noted. Vahard said the campaign targeted people of both sexes from all social strata, in towns and the countryside. UNAMSIL's headquarters in Freetown, and the UNAMSIL offices in the eastern town of Kenema and the northern towns of Makeni and Port Loko lined up programs for the campaign. Thousands of women were subjected to various types of violence, including harassment, rape, mutilation and murder, during Sierra Leone's 10-year rebel war, which ended in January 2002. According to a report by a panel of experts commissioned by the UN Fund for Women (UNIFEM), 94 percent of displaced households surveyed in Sierra Leone had experienced sexual assaults, including rape, torture, and sexual slavery. ### United States, Colorado

Amnesty International’s Rocky Mountain Women’s Human Rights Team, the Women’s Studies Departments at Metro State College of Denver, and the University of Colorado at Denver at the Auraria Campus organized a film screening of In the Time of the Butterflies (En el Tiempo de las Mariposas). This film follows the story of the Mirabal Sisters- symbols of defiant hope in a country shadowed by dictatorship and despair. Patria, Minerva, and Maria Teresa Mirabal were three sisters who resisted the Dominican dictator Trujillo and fought for the politcal freedom of their country. Because of their daring spirit, Las Mariposas (the Butterflies) were persecuted, incarcerated many times, and finally brutally assassinated on November 25th, 1960. In honor of these courageous sisters, November 25th is commemorated as the International Day to Eliminate Violence Against Women. In the Time of the Butterflies is also a National Bestseller by Julia Alvarez. There was also be a TEACH-IN: Global Implications of Culture on Violence Against Women. Topics for the teach-in included female genital mutilation, global trafficking, contemporary/sexual slavery, the effects of war/colonialism on women, domestic violence, forced sterilization, heterosexism/homophobia, and the role of women in liberation struggles. They also organized a Roundtable discussion “Stopping Violence Against Women in Our Communities.” Sponsored by Amnesty International’s Rocky Mountain Women’s Human Rights Action Team. Community members with backgrounds in anti-violence organizing came to facilitate a roundtable discussion on preventing violence against women at the local level. There was a training of trainers for Women's Rights NGOs on the Use of CEDAW in the promotion and enforcement of Human Rights of Women. It was a regional training involving nine States under the auspices of the Coalition of Eastern NGOs (CENGOS), which is an umbrella organisation of all NGOs operating in Eastern Nigeria. CIRDDOC is coordinating it. The training was based on the Peoples' Decade For Human Rights Education's (PDHRE) Manual and Video Drama. The trainees from the earlier training workshops were the resource persons in these workshops, and the program was structured in a way that three participants from each state (27) were trained. Thereafter, they will in turn, return to their states to train 30 Women's Rights activists in each of the states. It is aimed at building a crop of empowered persons to train activists on how to employ the Women's Convention in the work they do.

"SHOW US YA TITS!" "...SHOW US YA BRAIN" comeback to sexual harassment competition" was held. What is the worst line you've ever heard and what do wish you could have said? The organizers recognize that it isn't always safe or appropriate to respond to remarks made towards us but thought it would be great to have a filing cabinet of responses in our heads for those moments when we are too shocked to respond. The winner was announced on December 10. Following the announcement there was a multicultural celebration. Legalise-at, a support platform of migrant/women's organizations and individuals for illegalised migrant women, organized a Day of Action. Prior to December 10, Legalise-at hosted fundraising events. On the Day of Action activities took place at Westbahnhof (train station), Südbahnhof (train station), Landstrasse/Wien Mitte (train station), and Schottentor/University (video projection). On December 10, there were performances at different sites in Vienna, which included actions, music, theater, video projections, and invisible theater. These were done with the aim of drawing attention to the situation and problems of illegalised migrant women because: illegalisation means no health insurance, no possibility to secure one's existence, permanent fear of arrest and deportation; illegalised people are portrayed as a social, political and economic problem. In reality, economic profit is being made of their situation; the invisibility of illegalised women is double – working in private households, in the sex industry; the situation makes illegalised women especially vulnerable and exploitable; the so-called “integration package.” There was an evening event with a reading of poetry, a concert, and music. (For more information on performances (sites, time etc.) at 0676-93-88-763 or legalise\_at2002@yahoo.com. NUS held a Workshop on Human Rights at Khilgaon, Dhaka. International Human Rights Day 2002 was observed by Nari Unnayan Shakti (Women's Power for Development) through a workshop titled “Women Rights are Human Rights” held at Khilgaon NUS's Training Center. The workshop was facilitated by Afroja Parvin, Executive Director, Nari Unnayan Shakti. Community Women Leaders and Dhaka Project Staffs of NUS participated at the event. The main objective of the workshop was creating leadership quality among the community women to fight for human rights of the slum women. As reported, violence cases against women are 5961 during September 2001 - October 2002. Among them 83 women were killed and 111 raped. Total numbers of gang rapes were 42. The number of women who have had acid thrown at them is 30, and four women were burned to death. The participants of the workshop expressed their deep concern that occurrence of violence against women took place even more often than the report stated for lack of access to legal aid. In the slum area, large numbers of young women and adolescent girls were harassed by hoodlums. Generally, people are threatened by the terrorists, and many want to protest to try to stop them. The participants of the workshop demanded exemplary punishment of the terrorists. (For more information, e-mail: bangladeshafrojnus@bdmail.net)

Hungary, Budapest

We had an official closing of the signature campaign, in the form of a press conference. Various NGOs started a signature campaign demanding coherent domestic violence legislation, including an official definition of stalking and an introduction of the restraining order in legal practices. The campaign was started due to some horrific and highly publicized instances of domestic violence and abuse in Hungary. We've collected over 20,000 signatures in less than two months, and this without having any means for organizing country-wide signatures. Private people have started local collections, who have not been activists in any form before. The 20,000 signatures mean that every 500th Hungarian citizen has signed it, but the signatures continue coming in. ### Nigeria

CIRDDOC held a Regional Tribunal on Violations of Women's Human Rights Under the Guise of Culture and Tradition in Calabar, Cross Rivers State of Nigeria. There was a clamour to bring the tribunal to that area in order that the traditional institutions there would begin to see the harmful effects of the culture they promote. The area has a strong culture of women's subjugation. The tribunal brought to the fore issues of traditional practices and their harmful effects on, not only the women, but also the society in general. We invited traditional rulers and traditional opinion leaders in the society. We tried to use the opportunity to push for the inclusion of women in the traditional ruling institutions and cabinets. As part of this year's activities, they had also published a record of the proceedings of the National Tribunal on Reproductive Rights and Abortion, which CIRDDOC held in May 2002 in Lagos. It was disseminated at this subsequent tribunal, and during the tribunal, there was a desk in a separate room for provision of legal aid for those that need it.

It was the launch of the Isis-WICCE Research Report called “Documentation of Teso Women’s Experiences of Armed Conflict; Teso; 1987 – 2001.” The Teso region has undergone a series of conflicts both in form of armed conflict as well as raids from the Karamajong warriors. This has left a lot of inflictions on the community and affected the development of the area. The gender-based effects to the lives of women have affected their physical, psychological, and reproductive health. This report highlights the experiences that women have encountered and recommends issues that need to be addressed if total peace is to be realized in the Teso area. (Isis- WICCE)
